

Judge Tourgee and His Wife.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

Although "A Fool's Errand" was published last winter, it is still selling at the rate of 2,500 copies a week. They even read it in the South. A gentleman some time ago wrote to a doctor's office in Greensboro, North Carolina, so unexpectedly that the radical gentleman tried to hide a book he was reading. It was the "Fool's Errand." Being rather pushed into the corner by inquisitive questions, the doctor confessed that he was intensely interested in it and that he was really reading it for the third time. The strangest part of all is that the North Carolinians do not only take a rage over the book, but on the whole are said rather to enjoy it. They take the stories of the Ku-Klux Klan and other atrocious things as a complete and necessary part of the spirit of the South. The "Fool's Errand" of the book is Greensboro, North Carolina. "Warrington" is the plantation upon which Judge Tourgee settled. He went to stay. He was in no sense of the word a carpet-bagger. He went, as he says, "forgetful of himself, and that the social conditions of three hundred years ago were to be overthrown in a moment." His wife, a refined, accomplished woman, accompanied him, like himself full of hope and courage.

This is how they lived after they got there. When Mrs. Tourgee went along the streets of Greensboro, the women of that town made a wide circuit around her, and gathered back their clothes as if they were afraid of touching her. All that impatient female spite could do to poison her existence was done. Socially, she lived in an isolation as terrible as if she had been in the middle of the desert. Her Santa Barbara Island. Southern ladies often come North, nowadays, to visit here in Cincinnati. They are made as welcome and made the recipients of as many graceful, social attentions as if they had never been a war between the North and South, and as if, indeed, the North had never beaten the South in a fair fight. But Mrs. Tourgee, a lady as refined, as delicately bred as any woman in the land, went among Southern people, and only because she was from the North was not upon a level with "niggers." Perhaps, however, this is a proper manifestation of the "unconquerable spirit" Carolinians glory in.

The domestic happiness the "Fool" and his wife enjoyed may be inferred from the fact that whenever Judge Tourgee started out to attend Court Mrs. Tourgee never dared feel any confidence that she would come back again. She was a Northern man, and a Republican who dared to say so in what is supposed to be a free country. For this reason he was universally hated. Attempts were made to kill him. A plot to assassinate him was formed, much in the same manner as described in the "Fool's Errand," and it is by following the road that his horse chose.

A man who knew him well at Greensboro, and who lived there when he did, says he received stacks of anonymous letters from the "Regulators," threatening his life. They were papers covered with coffins, skulls, and cross-bones. Black men, and white ones too, used frequently creep secretly to his house, with their backs bleeding from the Ku-Klux bull-whip. They had been dragged from their beds in the dead of night, and thus cruelly lashed.

A Story About Ole Bull.

Here is a story told by a Berlin correspondent of Ole Bull which will be read now with interest. Se non e vero, etc.

Gaspar da Salo, the only violin maker who can be called the equal of Joseph Guarneri, lived and died at the commencement of the sixteenth century. He had made a violin with so much care, and was himself so satisfied with his work, that he desired Benvenuto Cellini to carve the neck. The head of the instrument is formed by a lovely elernb's face, which is supported by a smaller head and bust of a maiden, the features being of exquisite workmanship. The rest of the neck is most beautifully cut and gilded, and the colors are clear and bright, though they are now over 300 years old, as the instrument was made in 1532. The wood from which Gaspar da Salo chose his material grew on the banks of the river between Brescia and Verona, where it was so finely developed by the even temperature prevailing there that the veins of the wood are exactly an even distance apart. The mountains near Brescia are entirely denuded of trees. It is impossible to find a single elm, where, and the instruments of this master are unique in this respect and cannot be imitated. Cardinal Adebbrandini bought Gaspar da Salo's and Benvenuto Cellini's violin for 3,000 ducats, and presented it to the treasury of Innsbruck, from which it got the name of "Treasury violin," which it has since retained. When Innsbruck was invaded by the French in 1809 it came into possession of a soldier who gave it over to Riazak for the insignificant sum of 400 ducats. In 1815 Ole Bull visited Riazak, saw the violin and bid all for the instrument, offering as well the proceeds of the concerts he was then giving in Vienna. "Give me the fourth of Vienna and then we will see," was Riazak's reply. But he promised the artist if he ever parted with it he should give the preference. Two years later, in 1817, Liszt and Mendelssohn were dining with Ole Bull, and while they sat at a table the servant brought in an envelope bearing a great seal, which the host put one side. "Open your letter," cried Liszt, "it has a large seal and may be important." It proved to be from the son of Riazak, and imparted the news of his father's death, and that "a cause of his will directed that the Treasury violin should be sold to Ole Bull." The delighted artist told the good news to his friends. "What wonderful violin it must be to cost so much money," said Mendelssohn. "We must play the Kreutzer Sonata together the first time you use it in public." When the instrument came, it was found that there was no bar in it, and it had, therefore, never been played upon. As, as possible it was put in order, and as Mendelssohn suggested, it was consecrated to art by the playing of Beethoven's Sonata.

Origin of the Peach.

New York Times.

The peach which is now in season originated in Persia and northern India, and is of the same genus as the almond. The nectarine differs from the peach only in being smooth while the peach is downy. It is a very hardy fruit, produced and assuredly preserved by cultivation. The free stone of the French is their peche, while the cling-stone is their peche. A remarkable variety of Chinese origin, less the fruit compressed and flattened with almost evergreen leaves. The peach is cultivated widely in southern Europe, in many parts of the East, in South America and Australia, it has never, it is believed, attained the perfection of the fruit in the United States. New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Ohio raise superb peaches, and have often obtained medals for 20,000 to 25,000 trees. The quantity of dried peaches is reported to be steadily increasing, while peach brandy is diminishing. Peach water, obtained by bruising ing the leaves of the tree, mixing the pulp with water, and distilling, is not only employed for flavoring, but in medicine as a sedative and vermifuge. The stone of the fruit is very like the almond in its properties, and the blossoms are used in the perfume of a liquor called Persico. In the Old and New World there are, it is said, more than one hundred varieties of the delicate fruit.

Miss Neilson's Second Marriage.

Miss Neilson's death naturally brings into prominence certain details of her private history that were not before known. It was announced by her, at the time of her last appearance in this country, that she was about to retire from the stage, marry a wealthy Englishman, who, by the way, was said to be an Admiral, and settle down to the enjoyment of her handsome fortune. To this end, it will be remembered, she sold off some of her stage wardrobe before going to California. The veteran manner now appears to have been "admirably fitted, though he took the oval of his lady love at the Morgue, and will probably attend to its interment in Drompion Cemetery, where Tom Taylor was recently laid. It is announced that Miss Neilson had made other and entirely different matrimonial arrangements, and that, either just before or just after her departure for the United States last fall, she bestowed herself in marriage upon the good looking young English actor, Mr. Edward Compton, who occupied the position of leading man in her company. Whether the Admiral was aware of this circumstance does not appear. Nobody in this country suspected that matters between the star and her chief support had reached such a crisis, though her partiality for him was openly expressed and widely commented on. Miss Neilson had many admirers, even her managers being often lusted among them. It became a stock jest among the profession that each of Miss Neilson's roles was the handsomest she ever played with, and between four or five in this country there is yet a little difference of opinion as to which really is the handsomest, the contestants agreeing only on one point, namely, that Mr. Compton is not certainly a very nice looking young man of fine presence, good voice, and intelligence, and the question being left to a plebeian for determination, it is likely that he would have been elected. Miss Neilson, however, did not wait to hear what her audience thought, but was content with her own judgment.

There seems to be a little doubt, however, as to the disposition of her fortune, which must be very considerable. Miss Neilson claimed to have procured, in this country, a divorce from her husband, Mr. Philip Lee, but feared that for some reason not assigned it would not be regarded as valid in England. She was, therefore, about to sever connection for good and all, by obtaining an English decree against Lee. If we are not mistaken, the result of Miss Neilson's connection with the British divorce law is optional with her husband whether he would apply for a divorce or not, and he chose the former alternative. However, a divorce or two more or less makes a little difference on the stage. It may have some bearing on the question of inheritance, there being three children of the estate, namely, the two husbands and a daughter, and perhaps the old manner, who expects to be the second. What its exact amount is the correspondents have not yet begun to announce, but it must be large, although the lady lived generously, and looked after the money closely.

When a customer comes in and looks at our goods, and after going around town and examining goods and prices in all the other clothing stores, comes back and buys of us, we think that is good evidence that we are selling a little better goods and at a little lower prices than anybody else Give us a chance and we will prove what we say. A Case of 27 Years Standing.

ISSUED JUNE 20, 1880. Ayon Place, Boston, Mass. I have suffered from Dyspepsia severely, for twenty-seven years, from Dyspepsia. During that time I had the best medical advice, and tried the effect of dieting, traveling, fasting, and various other kinds of exercise, but without receiving permanent relief. I became very feeble, and my stomach at length rejected every kind of food, even rice-water. In January last I commenced taking the Peppermint Syrup, and found immediate benefit from it. In the course of three or four weeks I was entirely relieved from my sufferings. Since then I have enjoyed uninterrupted health. I recommended the Syrup to one of my friends, who had suffered severely from dyspepsia. He took one bottle of it, and it relieved him at once, and he has not had any return of the disease for three months. He considers himself permanently cured. Sold by all druggists. Sold in Janesville by Prentice & Evenson. ang25edow1w —Marshall Hogan is greatly annoyed by the receipt of anonymous communications calling attention to various things which need attention, as for instance, this morning, he received a note unsigned, stating that the cows and horses were running around in the Fourth ward last night in great herds, and kept the dogs barking so that the writer of the note could not sleep. He has closed up several such bits of anonymous information, and there is so seldom any foundation in fact, that he has tired of the chase, and hereafter will pay no attention to such letters unless signed by the name of the person giving the information, and in such cases the communications will be treated in a duly confidential manner.

FREAKS AT RACINE.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings of this week the New York Criticism Comedy Company presented that side-splitting comedy "Freaks," before delighted audiences in Racine. As the same entertainment is to be given in Janesville to-morrow evening, we give room to what the Daily News, of Racine, has to say about it:

"The play 'Freaks' or more correctly speaking the comedy, as made up by the Criticism Comedy company, was one of the most laughable compositions replete with striking and amusing situations.

"The company is a good one, there not being one badly cast part in the play. Each member of the company did good work and seemed to understand the character assigned them. The setting of the stage deserves special commendation, as each scene was new and finely adapted to the piece. This evening the same piece is to be given, and judging from the reception of the piece last evening, we have no doubt the hall will be crowded.

THE STATE FAIR.

We learn from Mr. Cyrus Miner, who has been to Madison, on business connected with the State Fair, that everything is being carefully yet rapidly arranged for making it the most successful exhibition yet held. There are numerous enlargements of stalls and buildings, and other improvements made, which will add to the convenience of exhibitors. The grounds were never in so good condition as at present, and the exhibition promises not only to be larger, but better than any previous one. In the stock and machinery department entries have already been made, and space assigned to an extent unprecedented.

It is now certain that General Grant and wife, Colonel Fred Grant, and General Hawley will visit Madison as guests of the Society. The precise dates cannot be announced at this time, but will be in the near future. Assurances are also given that General Phil. Sheridan and Senator Conkling will be present sometime during the week. The promised presence of these notables indicates that the event will be of more than ordinary importance and interest.

Goodrich named George Hawthorne; E. F. Cleghorn named D. G. Marsh. All of these gentlemen bespoke the merits and claims of those named, and at the close of the speech making, the Chairman appointed as tellers, S. S. Northrop, H. W. Maxon, C. R. Whitford, C. F. P. Pullen, and the convention proceeded to an informal ballot as follows:

Mr. Nowlan stated that as the name of O. H. He moved that John W. Sale be unanimously nominated for that position by acclamation. Carried.

COUNTY TREASURER.

The first ballot for County Treasurer was made a formal one. W. T. Vankirk presented the name of the present incumbent, Willis Miles. Mr. Smith of La Prairie urged the claims of William H. Stark, of that town. The ballot resulted:

CONCERNING THE COUNCIL.

The Business Disposed of at the Adjourned Meeting Last Night.

The City Council met last evening in pursuance with adjournment, the Mayor in the chair, and all the Aldermen present except Burns, Cox, Hemming and Nowlan.

After the usual reading and approval of the minutes, the bond of Marshal Hogan was presented, referred to the Judiciary Committee and approved.

The bond and application of Jane Churchhill for a saloon license was presented; also one from Ernest Reimer. Both were referred to the License Committee, and by them reported back without recommendation, whereupon they were laid on the table.

Ald. Robinson reported in favor of refunding to James Grant two dollars which Grant paid to get his cows out of pound. Granted to Grant.

Ald. Robinson, from the Judiciary Committee, reported in favor of changing the name of Milwaukee street, on the south side of Lincoln Park, in the Fourth ward, to Park avenue. So ordered.

Ald. Murdock, from the committee to whom was referred the proposed widening of the road running through the stone quarry south of Monterey bridge, in order to make a bed for the State to lay a sidewalk to the Institution for the Blind, reported that the street was now too narrow, and recommended that it be widened four feet, by filling, which should be paid out of the general fund.

Ald. Croft objected to paying for it out of the general fund. He would not oppose the improvement, if it was to be paid for out of the Fourth and Fifth ward fund, but he could not vote for it out of the general fund. The First ward had to pay for making and keeping in repair a road to the cemetery, and if that was just for the First ward, it was no less just for the road to the Institution being paid out of a ward fund, and not from a general fund.

Ald. Robinson moved to amend, and spoke of the Millmore contract. The road was never built properly, and the need of widening was one of long standing, to say nothing of the necessity of doing it as a bed for the sidewalk.

While the question was being discussed Ald. Nowlan put in an appearance, and quietly slid into his seat.

Ald. Barnes put in a stroke opposing the motion, but Ald. Croft and Robinson took the burden of the debate. Ald. Croft favored a wooden sidewalk, payable from the gas fund, or any other fund, which laid around loose, but was opposed to cutting away at the general fund, but after some further talk he concluded to vote for the motion, and it was carried unanimously; the cost of the improvement being limited to $150.

Ald. Croft presented the usual report of the Finance Committee. Concurred in.

On motion the bill of Andrew Jackson for $2 for burying a dead dog was referred to the Marshal to report as to who was liable to pay the same.

On motion for Ald. Norris the Street Commissioner was instructed to proceed with the work of filling in the road at the stone quarry. Mr. Cyrus Miner saying that it was dangerous to get the sidewalk completed before the Institution opened its fall term.

The clerk read an ordinance removing the present market ordinance, removing the wood, hay and straw market two blocks south of its present location. Laid over until the next meeting.

Ald. Conrad presented an order for a lamp post on the corner of Division and North First street. Third ward. Referred.

Ald. Robinson presented orders for two lamp posts, one at the corner of School and High streets, and the other at the corner of School and Lincoln streets, in the Fourth ward. Referred to Gas Committee.

The City Attorney, for Mrs. Addy, asked permission to have Richardson's old building, purchased by her, removed to her lot corner of Wall and Franklin streets. Carried.

On motion of Ald. Murdock, an order for $100 was ordered drawn in favor of George Haskell on account of repairing Monterey bridge.

On motion the Council adjourned.
